Motoring Associated Scams

How to spot them

With the financial crisis now in full swing, many people are looking at how to generate income often just to survive but also there are the many with whom it is a way of life so it is business as usual. Here are some of the commonest ones of which we need to be aware :

1. Expat living within the EU? If you have a foreign EU registered vehicle and you are now resident here and that means for tax purposes (you have a Residencia form receipt?) as well as for 183 days in any calendar year living here, you have to have any vehicle you keep and use here re-registered onto Spanish plates. I am sure from the correspondence I receive many from rightfully disgruntled expats who have neighbours who live here and who have not bothered to do this task, thus avoiding paying local and UK motoring taxes, you are aware of this. In the urbanisation we live in, there are at least 15 cars that fall into this category, some even with local advertising on so they can be proven to be illegal as I know they have been in daily use for a year plus, well it is amazing to what lengths such people will go to avoid being caught without actually taking the correct action or .re-registering their vehicle.

2. One of the selling points of the recently exposed bogus MOT certificates fraud was that if stopped at the roadside, the certificate with the date and address of a London garage could be used to prove that the vehicle had been out of Spain as the MOT must be done in the UK (for UK vehicles) plus of course the vehicle would not be on the UK Govt. Database as having satisfied a current MOT. But what they did not tell the “willing victims” was that the UK has a roadside number-plate recognition system now (currently being installed in Spain for Spanish vehicles), and if their vehicle had returned to the UK and been spotted (near the ferry ports?) the vehicle would immediately be flagged and a report sent out to the road-side policing units further along that road (it only takes road-side policing units further along that road (it only takes seconds) and the vehicle stopped. I have heard that in addition to the not having paid the annual road fund tax there, where a vehicle is then automatically crushed, it is being extended to other such motoring documentation offences as well.

3. Now I was the person who contacted the local English language newspaper that is distributed throughout Spain (and to be fair to the other newspapers it was the Euro Weekly news. This paper was advertising every week for over two years to my knowledge (I advised them in early 2009) what to anyone with the bare minimum of common sense just had to be fraud. After checking by phoning the advertisers, a “J G O’Connor”, I confirmed that it was fraud so I then advised the EWN three times even going into their offices but I was totally ignored.

4. Why am I pleased that these crooks have been arrested? Because they were cheating us expats out of our hard-earned money. Ok, I know that the “victims” were very silly and “party to the crime” and must now sweat to see if they will be prosecuted if caught, but the up to reported £200 asked for each bogus certificates would have gone towards legalising their vehicle here in Spain anyway. These “silly people” knew that the MOT certificates were not legal and so are also culpable in the crime, but someone has to look out for us impoverished expats, and if the EWN was not interested (as was another local paper I simultaneously reported it to in early 2009) then someone has to do the right thing. Initially I wanted my name kept out of it, but for why? I was doing those, back then and now, who bought the bogus certificates a great favour.

Murcia – a true delight

By Sue Neilson

A confession – after 9 years of living in Spain we have only just discovered Murcia and what a fantastic city it is to visit! It is small and un-touristy. Much of it is pedestrianised, making it easy to explore the delights of the old town and the fantastic tapas bars and restaurants. Cardenal Belluga Square is flanked by two of the city's most interesting buildings. The impressive cathedral, with its imposing baroque façade It was built in the 14th century, on the site of the mosque, by Alfonso X 'The Wise', who liberated Murcia from Moorish rule. This is the focal point for Murcia's famously extravagant and emotional religious festivals. Easter processions last for over a fortnight and still use the 18th-century figures made by Murcian sculptor, Francisco Salzillo. To the right is the 18th century Palacio Episcopal (Bishop's Palace), with its great doors decorated with beaten copper cherubim.

Not to be missed is the 19th century Casino in the Traperia. Its ballroom is decorated in the style of Luis 15th It boasts a stunning library, beautiful patios inspired by the Alhambra in Granada, an ornate ladies' powder room, a world championship billiard hall and an elegant Louis XV-style ballroom. After a €1.20 entry fee, pay €1 to blaze up to the hundreds of light bulbs on its magnificent chandeliers; a waltz is then played over the loudspeakers so that you can dance yourself into the 19th-century rapture. La Traperia is also one of the main routes for Marcia's spectacular September fair when the restful squares come alive with parades, pop concerts, barbeques and bullfights.

Everything worth seeing is within walking distance. The most famous commercial streets are Trapería, Platería and La Avda. Alfonso X el Sabio. The Paseo del Malecón near the River Segura is also a pleasant walk out of the city and then back again.

Spanish chefs in the know acknowledge that Murcia is home to Spain's best and most interesting tapas. The narrow alleyways of Murcia's town are lined with great bars and restaurants.

The Plazas of Las Flores and Santa Catalina, dotted with palm and jacaranda trees, tables and sunshades, is an ideal place to savour "tapas" at leisure, watching the locals meet and greet each other. Make sure you stop at the "Pastelería Bonache", to buy the unique Murcia "pastel de carne", a short-crust pastry filled with minced beef, hard-boiled eggs and chorizo, topped with a spiral of flaky pastry.

There were so many bars and tapas to try but our favourite was "La Tapa", where good things come in little parcels, as they say. Its showcases were ablaze with shrimps, prawns, scampi from the Mar Menor, cockles, razor shells, sea-horses or grilled or batter-coated cuttlefish.

We then wandered back towards the Cathedral and discovered just around the corner Bar Los Zagales. This friendly, intimate little bar had an incredible selection of tapas on display along the bar at only a few Euros per portion. So of course, we had to try a selection!

The find of the evening however was “La Sociedad” close to Plaza Puxmarina. This was an ultra modern bar serving the most exquisite and inventive tapas I have ever seen. Our favourite tapa was Delicia de Patata con Mousse de Oca y Jamon at €3.50.

The locals eat and drink their fill of tapas and then go out for dinner. We did the same and chose to dine at Restaurante Acuario in Plaza Puxmarina. It is a small family run restaurant specializing in Basque cuisine. I had a Fantasia de Queso de Cabra con Frutos Secos y Vinegreta de la Passion to start and my husband had two starters – an Empanadillo Crujiente de Bacalao con Phi Pil de Pimiento Amarillo and Bocaditos de Magra y Foie con Salsa de Trufa. Our main courses were Perdiz en Hojaldre en Espiral and Medallones de Solomillo con Foie y Fruto del Monte. We dessert shared an Espuma de Cafe al Whisky. With a bottle of Enrique Mendoza red and two coffees our meal came to €89.86. This meal was one of the best we have had in Spain to date and I would highly recommend this restaurant.

As the night was still young we decided to try our luck at the Casino in the Rincon de Pepe hotel. Luck was with us that night and we made enough on the roulette table to pay for our dinner!

Not wanting to drive home, we had booked a room at the Hotel Hesperia Murcia (3*) on Madre de Dios, just around the corner from the restaurant, where there was a special deal for €33 for a double room, making the end to a perfect evening.

Almond Burner flues

Almond shell burners you either love or hate. We have one and I had been toying with using a sleeve to capture some of the heat from the flue and lead it into an adjoining room.

The flue is 100 mm diameter and gets all but red hot. Enclosing a section in a second tube of 150 mm provides a sleeve with a 25 mm gap between the two.

The outer tube has a 'T' at the top to extend through a wall or wherever.

Sealing the outer to the inner tube top and bottom provides sufficient stability.

A series of holes drilled around the base of the outer tube allows air to be drawn in and the lower temperature at the pipe's destination provides the suction.

The precise measurements depend on the position and situation of the installation but a total length of 1 metre of outer pipe, including the 'T' provides a satisfactory flow of heat from the illustrated arrangement. If the sleeve were further from the stove or on a horizontal section I would have gone for something longer.

Almond Burner flues

The sleeve should not be too close to the stove but the extension from the 'T' needs to arrive at a convenient height and that will be more efficient the lower it is.

Tubes 100 mm 3.90 X 2	8.80
Tube 150 mm	8.00
'T' piece	15.25
	32.05
Soldering (ferreteria)	45.00
Installation (builder)	40.00
Total	€117.05

After all that someone will tell me you can buy these off the shelf!

Jokes

One day, a man came home and was greeted by his wife dressed in a very Sexy nightie. 'Tie me up,' she purred, 'and you can do anything you want.' So he tied her up and went golfing.

A woman came home, screeching her car into the driveway, and ran into the house. She slammed the door and shouted at the top of her lungs, 'Honey, pack your bags. I won the lottery!'

The husband said, 'Oh my God! What should I pack, beach stuff or mountain stuff?'

'Doesn't matter,' she said. 'Just get out.'

On holiday but what if things go wrong?

The summer holidays should be fun for people living in Spain and family/friends and tourists visiting the local area but what happens if things go wrong.....you don't think it will ever happen to you, but what if it does?

I have recently been reviewing the Embassy website for people on holiday or living in Spain, and here is some information you may like to keep close to hand!

The main website for British people in Spain is <http://ukinspain.fco.gov.uk/en/>

The telephone number for Madrid is as follows:

During office hours call 91 714 6300

Out of hours emergency assistance 91 714 6400

If your passport is lost or stolen in Spain here is the process:

- report the loss or theft of your UK passport to the local police
- get a police report as soon as possible
- inform your nearest British Consulate which is Malaga. Telephone (34) 95 235 23 00 from 08.30—13.30hrs (call Madrid outside these hours)
- apply to the UK Regional Passport Processing Centre for a replacement passport.

Online application forms can all be found on the website. If you have an urgent need to travel, you should contact your local Consulate/Embassy to apply for an Emergency Travel Document.

If your credit cards are stolen, here is the link to the website where nearly every bank account is detailed:

<http://ukinspain.fco.gov.uk/en/help-for-british-nationals/when-things-go-wrong/credit-cards-lost-stolen>

Need a doctor in an emergency?

Call 112 and ask for an ambulance.

If you are on holiday in Spain ensure you have a European Health Insurance Card (EHIC) to have immediate access to the emergency services health care at a Social Security Hospital. Private hospitals will not accept the EHIC, and will ask you to pay for your treatment or provide adequate insurance.

If you are resident in Spain, you can use your Health Card (tarjeta sanitaria) to gain access to full health care at Social Security hospitals.

If you are not eligible for a Social Security Health Card, you must ensure you have adequate private insurance.

Medication

I thought this section might be good all year round for people on holiday.

If you know of any over the counter medication and the Spanish name, please email me and I will make a list here....

Hayfever

Tablets—Pastelles

“Alerlisin comprimidos recubiertos con película” 10mg tablets - take one a day - they cost around 4 euros.

For a stuffed up nose, take “Respibien adultos oximetazolina HCl 15ml” one spray in each nostril twice a day.

With all medication, please make sure you speak with the Pharmacist or ensure you can take it with medication you are already taking!

Section 9

Legal

They grow up so fast. Age limits in Spain...

For anyone with children living in Spain, I think this article holds very important information so I am including again for anyone who might have missed it the first time around.

A client stumped me the other day when he asked whether it was right that his fourteen year old son had been to see a doctor without him being present or even knowing about it. Was the doctor negligent or breaking the law?

I asked a colleague and ascertained that the age limit for seeing a doctor without a parent present is sixteen. There is a caveat that says if the patient is physically suffering or in need of emergency attention, then the age limit can be disregarded. It got me thinking about age limits.

As in England, the age of majority in Spain is eighteen. In Scotland it is sixteen. That is the age when a person attains the status of an adult with the right to make legal choices for themselves. In practice this mainly refers to contract law but also applies to voting. Contracts or agreements with someone below the age of majority are not valid.

But much younger age limits apply for all sorts of other activities. Some of these are lower than Britain's. The age of consent for straight and gay sex is thirteen for example. The minimum age for marriage is the same as Britain i.e. sixteen with parental consent and eighteen without it, though marriage at fourteen is possible with court permission. That is still more conservative than in Lebanon where it is nine for girls.

One of the most contentious age limits in Spain is the ever sensitive topic of abortion. The law always used to be that abortion required parental consent up to eighteen. The government has introduced a new law which takes effect this July lowering this to sixteen on condition that children inform their parents. Children can have plastic surgery from sixteen already.

The alcoholic drinking age is eighteen but this is not well enforced. Surveys suggest that three out of four attempts by the underaged to buy alcohol in Spain are successful. Galicia and the Asturias have plumped for a lower minimum of sixteen in any case. The age at which it is legal to buy tobacco is eighteen but there are no restrictions on vending machines which are ubiquitous and accessible.

The minimum age someone can legally work is sixteen but under eighteens living with their parents need their permission. Unlike the UK it does not appear there are exceptions for certain light, part time jobs, like paper rounds.

You have to be sixteen to run with the bulls like they do in Pamplona. There is no national minimum age for just attending a bullfight and kids often go with their parents. Bullfighting schools accept trainee matadors from the age of twelve.

Finally, driving. The age for taking a moped out onto public roads is fourteen, though set to rise to fifteen this September. Teenagers have to wait until eighteen to drive a car. The age when the Spanish are first allowed to use the car's indicators has yet to be determined.
